The Charities@Work Rising Star Award is awarded annually to an individual who has worked in employee engagement for one to seven years and through his or her work has shown exceptional leadership and has exemplified professionalism and creativity in the areas of corporate social responsibility and employee engagement.

The winner of the 2013 Rising Star Award is Accenture's Robin Boggs.

Accenture is a global management consulting, technology services and outsourcing company, with approximately 261,000 people serving clients in more than 120 countries.

After 12 years in Accenture's consulting workforce, Robin became the company's US Corporate Citizenship Lead in 2010. Since then she has been focused on aligning Accenture's US employee engagement programs with the company's global corporate citizenship initiative, Skills to Succeed, which aims to equip 500,000 people around the world by 2015 with the skills to get a job or build a business.

Under Robin's leadership, Accenture's US Corporate Citizenship program has focused its Skills to Succeed efforts in three key areas: preparing the next generation to find their first jobs, re-skilling people for better opportunities and helping entrepreneurs start or build a business. Accenture has a rich tradition of giving back to the community in the more than 30 US cities where the company has offices, and continues to gain momentum with strategic initiatives across the nation and around the world.
